M.D. OF MONTGOMERY IS NOT UNANIMOUS ON HOSPITAL GRANT

The regular monthly meeting of the council of the Municipal District of Montgomery was held at the council offices on Saturday June 19th, with all the councillors present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted on motion of Coun. Maynard.

A letter was read from E. Brandt complaining of the state of his land as affected by a ditch built by the Municipality. It was moved by Coun. Jewett that the matter be referred to the Council for Division 3, and for him to act as he thought right in the matter.

P. C. Petersen interviewed the council regarding the draining of Hard Lake.

It was moved by Coun. Ballhorn that a start be made this year to lower the level of Hard Lake by deepening the ditch at the lower end and that an expenditure of $300 be allowed for this work to be done as far as it can be for that figure.

A delegation from the hospital board consisting of Mayor Montgomery and Dr. N. A. Johnson interviewed the council with a view to the hospital agreement with this Municipality being renewed for 1926.

It was moved by Coun. Maynard that the grant this year be $500.00 the same terms as last year. The motion was lost.

It was moved by Coun. Hussard that the grant for this year be the same as last year—$1000.00 under the same contract. Carried.

Bills and paychecks were passed for payment on motion of Coun. Ballhorn, after which the meeting adjourned.

EDMONTON COLLEGE IS TO BE ENLARGED

The Rev. C. Thies returned on Saturday morning from St. Louis, Mo., where he attended the convention of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran church. There were 970 accredited delegates in attendance besides nearly 1000 visitors. Many important matters came before the meeting. More than one million dollars will be spent on the educational institutions of the Synod, of which the college in Edmonton will receive a share. The course at the Edmonton Concordia College was extended to six years and two additional professors will be added to the staff. The grounds will be levelled and turned into a park.

Another appropriation of one and one half million dollars was made for the church extension fund which will enable smaller congregations to borrow money for building of churches without interest. Of the money set aside for home missions, $55,000 will be spent in Canada. Of this amount Alberta and B.C. receives $30,000.

Of special interest was the dedication of the new theological seminary which the synod has erected at St. Louis at a cost of $3,000,000. More than 100,000 Lutherans were in attendance at the celebration. A choir of 1000 voices rendered appropriate music. The seminary is now the largest protestant theological institution of its kind in the world.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR DR. AND MRS. R. D. ROBERTSON

A party was given at the home of Mrs. H. J. Montgomery on Wednesday evening of last week in honor of Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Robertson, who are leaving the city shortly for the east, where the doctor will take post-graduate courses.

"500" was played and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Mrs. Robertson was presented with a beautiful bouquet of Opheelia roses. The hostesses were Mrs. H. J. Montgomery, Mrs. R. J. Whyte, Mrs. J. P. Johnson and Mrs. George D. Wallace.

ANGUS RIDGE

On Monday night Mr. Inglis and Mr. C. H. Russell visited the Angus Ridge community, and carried the Conservative message to the farmers and others in that locality. Mr. Ernest Switzer presided at a well attended meeting, at which both Mr. Inglis and Mr. Russell received the Liberal party in the solar plexus and gently but firmly reproved the erring steps of the Farmer regime.

GWYNNE

On Thursday, the marriage was quietly solemnized, at the United church manse, of Miss. Catherine, of Lillian Florence Burkhardt, of Gwynne, and Mr. Wm. Bryan Harmon, of Home Garden, Calgary. Rev. T. A. Symington, M.A., B.D., was the officiating clergyman. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Harmon expect to motor to their new home in California.

DISTRICT EXHIBITS AT EDMONTON FAIR

One of the big attractions at the Edmonton Exhibition will be the exhibits of natural resources from the electoral districts in northern Alberta. This affords an excellent opportunity to place the resources of this community before the thousands of visitors who will visit the fair this year, and there is no doubt but that much good would come to this district as the result of such an exhibit if carefully assembled and properly displayed. We understand the Wetaskiwin Exhibition Association has the matter in hand, but up to the present nothing has been done. Now is the time to act if a creditable showing is to be made.

RECIPES FOR MILK DRINKS

It is universally known that milk, besides being a refreshing drink is a very valuable food, supplying the necessary elements for growth and health in an easily digestible form. Unfortunately, many adults and some children have a distaste for milk in its natural state.

The Dominion department of agriculture has just issued a small circular distributed free by its publications branch, Ottawa, which gives a number of recipes for milk drinks to suit any taste. They are easy to prepare, delicious and refreshing. In making them, ordinary household flavoring extracts, spices, juices from fresh or canned fruits, or fruit syrups may be used; soda water may or may not be added. These recipes will be especially valuable in the case of children who have a fabled distaste for milk and for invalids whose food consists mainly of liquids, and who relish a change in the flavor and appearance of the milk they drink.

Butchering may soon become a lost art. Farmers do not once more throw their knives and tighten their hoops on the old scalding barrels. To sell a hog for 10 cents a pound and get it back at 30 cents is paying a pretty high price to get out of the trouble of butchering and curing meat.

WEDDINGS

SCHMIDT — VIRTUE
On Tuesday of this week a quiet but pretty wedding took place at the Lutheran manse, when the Rev. C. Thies united Mr. Wm. Schmidt and Miss Edna Virtue in marriage. They were attended by Miss Mary Hladik and Mr. Earl Virtue, brother of the bride. The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony on a short honeymoon to Calgary and Banff. On their return they will be at home to their many friends at the residence of the bride's parents, north of the city.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schmidt, who are at present in the state of Washington on an extended trip. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Virtue. Both young people are well and favorably known to the city. The happy couple left for their honeymoon during the last of June.

DAVIS — FIVELAND
A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. L. W. Fiveland, Monday morning, June 21st, at 11 o'clock, when Anna Katherine, daughter of Mrs. Hannah Fiveland, became the bride of James Richard Davis, of Westmore.

The bride looked charming in a cream satin gown, wearing a necklace of pearls. Rev. A. L. Elliott performed the ceremony in the presence of the bride's mother, her two brothers, Mr. and Miss Doran and Mr. A. Lind.

The happy young couple returned to Westmore and will shortly leave for home, where they will make their home.

WRIGHT — BRIDGEMAN
The residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bridgeman, of Wetaskiwin, was the scene of a very beautiful, though quiet, home wedding on Saturday, June 19th, when Miss Edna Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Wright, of Ponoka, was united in marriage with Mr. James Wright of Lacombe.

The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her brother, William E., as the wedding march was played by Mrs. A. L. Elliott. Rev. E. J. Bridgeman, of Saskatoon, brother of the bride, and Rev. A. L. Elliott, officiated in the presence of a few immediate friends of the contracting parties. Miss Joan Bridgeman was a charming little flower girl.

After the ceremony and the signing of the register, all enjoyed a dainty buffet luncheon served by Mrs. R. J. White and Miss Wright. While Mrs. Elliott poured the tea, the happy couple left on the 9:40 train for Edmonton and were given a most joyous and well wished of friends and well wishers of the bride and groom.

Mr. Wright will reside at Lacombe and carry with them the best wishes of a great host of friends from Wetaskiwin and elsewhere.

Surprise at Knob Hill

A delightful afternoon was recently spent at the home of Mrs. E. Elison, when a party of ladies gathered and surprised Mrs. W. Mathers, wife of the camp chef, with a shower of useful and dainty articles of baby apparel. The afternoon was spent in the most enjoyable manner, and included singing duets by the Misses Grace Elison and Fern Larson, and scripture reading and prayer by the new minister, Rev. F. G. Mathews. Tea was served by Mrs. C. Anderson and Mrs. E. Elison. Near the close of the afternoon, Mrs. Mathers was asked to follow a string leading upstairs down stairs, in my lay's chamber, and elsewhere, leading to a well filled basket hidden in the bathroom. The surprise of the afternoon was two-fold for the mischievous cook had substituted Mrs. Husted's baby for the gifts, which the ladies were enjoying the fun upstairs.

The men of the party were invited in by the cook to see the fun when the end of the string led to the sleeping babe. The consternation pictured on the face of the genial hostess was a treat to be held.

Misses Fern Larson and Grace Elison are special singers assisting in the special services held by the minister in Knob Hill hall.

Eucharistic Congress Opened With Solemn Pomp and Ceremony

Chicago, June 21.—Solemn and stately ceremonies, symbolizing with all the pomp and glory of ancient Rome the unity of a world-wide church marked the formal opening Sunday of the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress.

One of the mightiest hosts of pilgrims ever assembled in Christendom for the purpose of making public profession of their faith in Jesus inaugurated their five-day festival by worship in more than five thousand masses, in the cathedral of the Holy Name, which His Eminence John Cardinal Tamm was formerly installed as the legate of Pope Pius XI.

Cardinal Munster, sponsor of the congress and host of its pilgrims, uttered a glowing prayer in his address to the Roman curia, and before the harvest of the spiritual harvest of holy communion by more than one million souls in the Chicago archdiocese Sunday.

Archbishops, bishops, abbots, priests and lay pilgrims from the far flung corners of the world gathered before the resplendent cathedral sanctuaries, eleven cardinal priests, or princely throne, led in the adoration of the eucharist. More than four hours elapsed between the sounding of the processional and the bestowing of the apostolic blessing by Cardinal Tamm as he descended from his throne at the conclusion of the services.

Among participants in the cathedral ceremonies, were approximately 400 bishops, a score or more of mitred abbots, more than 200 monsignors, several thousand priests and monks, six hundred seminarians and hundreds of nuns—all clad in the robes of their office of order.

The ceremonies began with the reading of the papal brief, first in Latin and then in English, by the Very Reverend the Monsignor Dennis J. Dune, of Chicago. In his message to the congress, Pope Pius XI, defined the purpose of the gathering to the "conservation and invigoration of Christian life through devotion to and reception of the eucharist."

Weekly News Bulletin

Crop Conditions Improved

Since the publication of the official crop report of the department of agriculture a week ago, conditions have been considerably improved in the southern portion of the province by heavy rains. These were general over a considerable area south of Calgary and east, south and west of Lethbridge, and good showers also fell in the southeastern district. The rains have brought relief to grain crops which were beginning to suffer from lack of moisture, and the general outlook now is very satisfactory.

Many Wells Drilling

Turner Valley south of Calgary is witnessing considerable activity in the oil drilling line, there being now fifty wells in process of drilling with five others ready to start drilling within the next few days. Arrangements are being made, it is stated, to bring the Macleod well in as a producing well, at a depth of 3700 feet. This well is giving a gusher of naptha as high or higher in quality than the famous Royalty No. 4, which for more than a year has been giving a production of 15,000 barrels a month of 73 degree Bannock.

Royalty's Productions

Official figures of the Royalty company on the production of the big Royalty No. 4 naptha well in Turner Valley for the year ending May 31, last, show that the 12 months production of No. 4 total 6,824,763 gallons or approximately 184,487 barrels of 73 degree Bannock gravity naptha. This is the highest grade of casing head gasoline, very volatile, and colorless as water. In addition the well is producing between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Just as a customer who had bought a second hand car at Millet was preparing to drive off at a garage there, the village marshall hailed him and said: "Hey, there you will have to paint that car red." "Who said so?" asked the owner. "It's the law," said the marshall. "What's the new idea now?" demanded the owner, getting ugly. "Why, the law says that any tin can that contains gasoline shall be painted red," replied the marshall.

ALL IS READY FOR KIWANIS KARNIVAL BIG ATTRACTIONS

The next big event will be the Kiwanis Karnival, which will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week—June 29th, 30th, and July 1st. The several booths as well as the dance floor, the curling rink have been fixed up, and every Kiwanis is rarin' to go. This is a community enterprise as the funds will go to the swimming pool fund, and those behind the movement are expecting every citizen to do his little bit to put this thing over.

A big program of attractions and sports has been prepared, as may be seen by the advertisement in another column of this issue, including a monster street parade, baseball tournament, special dancing features by the Martin, the dance floor, the Crooked Lake Boys' Band, novelty horse races, and other sports, while the Edmonton Newsboys' Band will be the big attraction on Dominion Day. In addition to the above there will be the jittery dance each night, slide shows, games, juke joint, hot dog stand, etc.

Owing to the inclement weather, the dance which was to have been held last week, has been postponed until Friday night of this week.

CONSERVATIVE PRINCIPLES ARE RESTATED BY THE CONSERVATIVE LEADER

A. A. McGillivray Sets Forth in Plain Language What the Provincial Conservative Party Stands for in Coming General Election.

Co-Operative Marketing Extension Advocated

Proportion of Monies Expended on Roads to Go Toward the Maintenance of Country Roads as Well as Main Highways—Encourage the Inflow of Capital and Immigration to Supplement Efforts of the Dominion Government.

SPEAKING at Rockyford on Thursday afternoon, June 18, in support of Hugh Miller, Conservative candidate in the Gleichen riding, A. A. McGillivray, leader of the provincial Conservative party, reiterated the items in the policy of the party that he has stated from different platforms in Alberta since being elected leader in August, 1925.

In his usual fighting style, Mr. McGillivray reviewed the record of the old Liberal administration and the record of the present government. Summing up his appeal to the electorate following the declaration of political principles, Mr. McGillivray said the Liberal party could go back into power and its record cannot be hidden under the cloak of one new convert.

Give Them Chance
The present government has failed to cope with public opinion, the chief of which are: better education, the northern railways, natural resources and the finance problem that it has had to face, then why not give the provincial Conservative party a chance to demonstrate what it can do? Mr. McGillivray left here at 3 p.m. for Oyen and other parts in Acadia riding.

In reiterating points in the Conservative policy that have been enunciated by him from many platforms since he took the leadership of the party in August, 1925, Mr. McGillivray said: "I have not gone in for the form of political advertising that is known as the 'spoke'." He observed that the Liberal leader leaned toward them in 1925. He issued one which commenced as follows: "True representation to the people is the basis of the party system. Independent candidates in West Calgary outline constructive proposals for the establishment of a democratic government freed from partisanship and partyism. Propaganda representation truly reflects popular will. Patronage system which is vital to the maintenance of party system, and is today a national scandal, will disappear under the reformed method of election."

"In so much as the new manifesto of the Liberal leader commenced as follows: 'Liberal manifesto—J. T. Shaw, Liberal leader, issues statement of party policy, and in so much as this latest manifesto by Mr. Shaw, in so far as it does not consist of copybook platitudes and glittering generalities, is partly taken from the pronouncements of this Conservative party. It may be well for me to state the point of the Conservative party upon some of the provincial issues, a position taken and given public expression to on the platforms of this Conservative party at times when Mr. Shaw was still an Independent."

Conservative Platform
The provincial Conservative party stands for the following:

"1. Redistribution whereby the number of constituencies will be reduced so that there will be not more than 45 members in the legislature. This reduction is to be made, having regard both to population and to the sparsely settled areas."

"2. Reduction in the amount paid as occasional indemnities of members by $500."

"3. A determined effort to make of the United Farmers of Alberta organization something more than a mere political machine and to advance its development along social and economic lines."

"4. The encouragement of co-operative marketing. Even as supporters of the Conservative party brought Sapra to Alberta without thought of political advantage, so will the Conservative party support and movement for the benefit of the farmers, without seeking political glorification."

Money for Roads
"5. A fair proportion of the monies

THE KEEPER OF THE BEES

By GENE STRATTON PORTER

In the house, before the telephone with a face sheet white, hanging to the instrument for support, shading every part of his being, short and stout, with a face that was the depths of his soul, stood Jamie. He had taken down the receiver and said, "Hello!" as casually as any man ever had said it, and then answered in the affirmative to the inquiry, "Is this James Lewis MacFarlane of the St. Mary's Madre Apary?"

"Yes," panted Jamie. "The voice went on: 'Your wife last night gave birth to a fine son, but she is not reacting from the shock of the birth and we are growing alarmed.'"

Jamie hung up the receiver and reeled to the bedroom and began seeing how quickly he could put on suitable clothes to make his appearance on the street. As he was about to call for the little Scout and when the constable appeared, he said: "Look up quickly. Have the front door key ready for me. I have an urgent call to the city and I don't know when I'll be back."

"Aw!" said the little Scout, in disgust. "I came to stay all day! There was a lot I wanted to get done on my property."

"Yes, I know," said Jamie. "Maybe tomorrow. You better call the gang and play the rest of the day on the beach or run along home."

He was out of the door, locking it behind him. Then he made a head-long plunge down the walk and down the street toward the car line.

The little Scout stood looking after him.

"Important business! Well, I'll tell the world it's important! The home is on fire, the dog's hit the baby, Mrs. MacFarlane's van, the government ain't vanishing, God's dropped out of heaven, and there ain't a darned thing right in the whole world! Leap to it, Jamie! Fix it all up first. Oh, boy!"

Jamie cared little for the hospital and a desk and down a hall and into an elevator and then into a small room. He stood beside a bed and took one long look. Then he turned his head back from the door, waiting behind the bed, holding the wrist of the gasping woman, to the nurse.

"I have made a mistake," he said. "They've given me the wrong number. This isn't my wife."

The nurse stepped over and from the contents of a drawer picked up a marriage certificate that he had seen before.

"James Lewis MacFarlane," she read from it and replaced it in the drawer.

Jamie took a grip on the foot of the bed and leaned over. The girl lying on it was not a girl he had even seen, not a girl, who by the wildest stretch of imagination, could have been the Storm Girl. Jamie gripped the insensate wood harder and bent lower and stared wide-eyed. What did it mean?

A Practical Prescription For Sour, Acid Stomach

Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach trouble nowadays are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased, but if this acid condition is allowed to continue, the acid will very likely eat into the stomach walls and produce gastritis with stomach ulcers. This may render a radical surgical operation necessary even to prolong life.

Therefore, an "acid stomach" is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. The excess acid or stomach hyperacidity can easily be neutralized by Disburated Magnesia taken in teaspoonful doses in a glass of water after each meal. Larger quantities may be used if necessary as it is absolutely harmless. Be sure to ask your druggist for the pure Disburated Magnesia especially prepared for this purpose.

How could this have happened? Why should this girl have been in her possession the certificate which symbolized the marriage that he had entered into with the Storm Girl?

He made his way to the side of the bed and looked intently at the left hand lying nerveless on the coverlet. There was the ring that he had bought, on the third finger, the cheap little wedding ring. He picked up the hand and examined the ring until he made sure. He knew that both the doctor and the nurse were watching him.

The doctor spoke: "How long has it been since you've seen your wife?" Jamie opened his lips to say that never in all his life had he seen the woman before him and stopped with the words unsaid.

If he said what he was thinking, if he said that he had left her to life or the greater mercy of death with the revelation that he did not know her, that he had never seen her, then where was the beauty of the deed that he had tried to do in covering a woman who needed a name with his?

"You mean," he said thickly, "that I'm strange? I don't recognize her? Maybe it's the pain, and it's been a long time since we were married."

"I've learned," said the doctor, "that there are many curious and some inexplicable things in this world, but I can't help expressing the opinion that you're being a coward out of a human if you've allowed your wife to go through anything so crucial as the nerve strain and the physical strain of approaching maternity and delivery and given no sympathy, extended no care. It scarcely seems human."

Jamie licked his lips and took his medicine. He could not say anything in self-exculpation that would not cast a reflection on the girl before him, and in the few moments that he had stood staring down at her he had realized that her every breath was coming shorter.

"For God's sake!" he cried, "try to do something! Forget about lecturing me now! Do something! Don't, don't let her slip away like this!"

The doctor looked up at Jamie and said quietly: "There is nothing known to medical science that three of the best doctors in the city have not been trying all night, and some very excellent nurses have performed their duties carefully. You might as well understand that it is very near the end."

How lay a woman dying; dying in youth; dying in beauty; dying, in her own thought of herself, in shame, in searching agony because some man, somewhere, had held her body lightly and violated it and consigned it to months of painful suffering, to hours of painful suffering, to the long years of unloved death. Jamie recoiled on his feet and the nurse thrust a chair under him.

She looked at him penetratingly and then she said deliberately: "Doctor, there's something about this I don't understand, but I will not join you in the belief that there is anything unmanly attaching to Mr. MacFarlane. In the few days she was here before the child was born, Mrs. MacFarlane seemed to adore him. She had no unkind word to say against him."

"What's that?" asked the doctor, sharply.

"I am telling you the truth," said the nurse. "She said that he was the noblest man, the finest man, in all the world. She said that he had done one thing so big and shining that no other man would have done it. She said that she had a feeling that she would not survive. She said that if the baby should live, provisions had been made for it, but she expressed a wish to me so that she was a man as he might have it. I don't know how to explain the fact that they have been separated these months, but I do know that the fault does not lie with Mr. MacFarlane."

"In that case," said the doctor to Jamie, "very likely I owe you an apology. I am seeing so much these days that is exactly as things should not be in this world, that I am getting fairly raw. I apologize if I have said something I shouldn't. About your son and provision having been made for him, that's up to you. If you want the child, of course, in the face of this marriage certificate, the law will give him to you."

Jamie turned to the nurse. "What did she say?" he asked.

"She said once," answered the nurse, "that it was impossible, but if it were possible, she would give her life gladly if she knew that you would take the baby and make of him the kind of a man that you are."

"All right," said Jamie, tersely. "I will take the baby. You may get him ready. I have a comfortable home. I can see a way in which he can be well cared for."

Then Jamie and the doctor and the nurse were astonished and bewildered. A low laugh broke from the lips of the girl on the pillow, a low, exultant, carressing laugh, a laugh full of wonder and delight and unbelief, and with it came the last remnant of breath from the tortured body and the bright head on the pillow rolled back and lay still.

After a few moments, Jamie turned to the nurse. "Have you instructions?" for the necessary arrangements?" he asked.

The nurse nodded. "Everything has been provided for, and most unusual, all expenses were paid when Mrs. MacFarlane entered the institution. In such an event as this we were ordered to prepare her body and send it to her family."

"All right," said Jamie, arising and mustering his strength. "Where is the boy?"

The doctor looked dubious. "You have someone competent to take charge of a new-born baby?" he asked.

"I have," answered Jamie. "A fine, clean woman who has reared three children to maturity."

"All right, then," said the doctor. "Give him the baby."

The nurse disappeared and presently returned. She put into Jamie's arms a bundle odorous of castile and boreal, a thing that was warm and alive and moving. Convenient to his reach she set a suitcase, and Jamie put on his hat, crooked his arm about the live bundle, picked up the suitcase, and walked from the room.

Chapter 16
When Jamie dismissed the taxi and started up the front walk of his home with the bundle and the suitcase, he was surprised to find the little Scout sitting on the front steps beside a bottle of milk half consumed, with crumb decorations prominently on the face (Continued on Page 6)

Two Serious Operations

Shattered Her Nerves

Made Her Heart Bad

Mrs. Henry Carter, Wetaskiwin, N. S., writes:—“I am writing to tell you, as well as others, what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me.

Fourteen years ago I had a stroke which worked on the nerves of my head, and left me with nervous headaches, and every nerve in my head would just seem to “creep and crawl” until at times I thought I surely could not live.

Then, two years ago, I went through two very serious operations which completely shattered my nerves and I became nothing but a nervous wreck, and my heart became also in a bad state, so I decided to call in our family physician and he told me that I had nothing seriously wrong with my heart, but that my nerves were so bad they were pressing on my heart and causing all the trouble, and advised me to use some good heart and nerve tonic.

Not long after that my husband was at the store and brought me home a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and since that time I have taken several boxes, as it seems to me that they are the only thing I can take that works on my nervous trouble, and I would not, for any money, be without them in the house.

I cannot praise them too highly, and would advise any one suffering from any form of nerve trouble to give them a fair trial, as I know by my personal experience that the results can be nothing but satisfactory.”

Election
Forecasts

It is customary at about this stage of an election campaign for newspapers and friends of the different candidates to announce that their favorite candidate is sure to win, and will even go so far as to give the odds. But during the contest in this constituency, it would take a wise seer to foretell the result. We are of the opinion that even the candidates themselves are not sanguine of the result of the vote on Monday next. There are three good men in the field, and they are all hopeful that they will each receive enough first choices to keep in the running, and will eventually win out after the second choices are considered. There is little doubt but that it will require the second choices to select the winner in this contest.

As the election is certain to be close, The Times would urge that every elector, insofar as possible, go to the poll and exercise his or her right to vote. It may be your vote that will select the man who will represent this constituency at Edmonton. And be sure that you do not spoil your ballot by voting in the old manner of making an X—use the figures 1 and 2.

The

Transferable Vote

A new feature in the elections of the province will be held on Monday, June 28th will be the transferable vote.

Under the old system, when three or more candidates were running in the one constituency, each elector had but one vote or one choice, and marked his ballot with an X opposite the name of his candidate. The candidate having the highest number of votes was declared elected, although he might not have a majority of the votes polled.

Under the transferable vote system, the use of the X is done away with, and voters using an X in marking their ballot on Monday next will simply be throwing away their vote as ballots so marked will not be counted.

You must use Figures in marking your ballot on Monday. Place the figure 1 opposite your first choice and the figure 2 opposite your second choice and the figure 3 opposite your third choice if you wish to indicate a second and third choice.

The deciding as to who is the winning candidate is not so easy as under the old system. One of the candidates in a three or more cornered fight may have a majority over each of the other candidates but unless he has the “quota” he is not elected.

The quota is that proportion of the votes which necessarily secures the election of a candidate.

In a three cornered fight such as we have in the Wetaskiwin constituency, the quota necessary will be one vote more than half the votes polled.

Should no one of the three candidates obtain the necessary quota of first choice votes in the first count, the candidate having the least number of first choice votes is eliminated and all his second choice votes are distributed between the other two candidates as the figures 2 indicate and in this manner the returning officer can arrive at the wish of the voters as to whom the majority desire to represent them.

Where there are two candidates to be elected in the one constituency the process is a little different, but as Wetaskiwin has to elect only one candidate we will not go into this explanation at this time.

One of the most important things to remember is that you must not use X in indicating your choice, but must use the figures 1, 2 and 3.

FARMERS FARM
THEIR OWN LAND

In 1920, of the farmers in Minnesota, 24.7 per cent were occupying land not their own. In 1910 the percentage was 21.0. This from the Agricultural Year Book of the United States.

In Iowa 41.7 per cent were farming rented land in 1920, as against 37.3 per cent ten years before.

In North Dakota 55.6 per cent of the farmers were tenants, against 14.3 per cent ten years before.

In South Dakota 34.9 per cent of the farmers did not own the land they tilled, compared with 24.5 per cent ten years before.

In Nebraska 42.5 per cent of the farmers were tenants in the latter year, while the percentage in the former year was 35.1.

In Kansas 40.4 per cent of the farmers were tenants, while ten years earlier the percentage was 30.8.

In these states from eleven to 42 farmers out of every hundred farm land which belongs to someone else. And the percentage is growing every year.

Dear land is the main reason for the prevalence and growth of tenancy. The renter rents because he cannot buy. Lacking the capital with which to acquire the property, he pays the owner interest on its presumed value.

In a considerable percentage of cases the tenants were formerly owners. Changing conditions, mounting costs of operation, increasing taxation, mistakes in judgment, crop failures, personal ill-fortune, have all contributed to weed some out of the ranks of owners and place them in the list of renters.

In Central Alberta a tenant farmer is a rarity. Figures are not available but probably not two per cent of the farms in this territory are operated by renters or on shares.

Cheap land is the main reason why nearly all central Alberta farmers own the land they occupy. Other factors have contributed of course. Some began here with money enough to buy farms anywhere. But the great majority began with small means and could become owners only because the land was cheap.

Land in central Alberta is still cheap, and the opportunity to become a farm owner is still open to the tenant who is paying rent for the use of high priced land in more congested sections.—Viking News.

CALGARY STAMPEDE
AND EXHIBITION

Great preparations are being made for the Calgary exhibition and stampede, to be held July 6th to 10th next. Every year this great annual holiday event is enjoyed by larger crowds and the event itself is improving in the matter of size, thrills and educational features.

No other exhibition and stampede provides such entertaining free features up-town. These include the great opening feature, the stampede parade held Monday morning, with thousands of Indians, cowboys, chuck wagons, mounted police, old-timers, industrial floats, etc. In this parade, there will be at least 1,200 horses and nine bands. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings there is the usual uptown street display, where autos are barred and cowboys, Indians, chuck wagons, old timers' outfits, packing competitions, etc. provide colorful programs never to be forgotten. Friday night is the night of the great cowboy and old-timers' ball. In all of the above events, His Majesty's Coldstream Guards' band will participate.

The exhibits at the exhibition grounds will be more numerous than ever, as $2,500.00 has been added to the prize list. The best livestock will be gathered together from Canadian and United States herds. The horse races will bring together the best thoroughbreds from a radius of two thousand miles. Both races and stampede events will be continued for six days this year. His Majesty's Coldstream Guards band will play each evening in front of the grand stand. This is considered the best military band in the world. And especially fine vaudeville programs will close each evening's entertainment.

Saturday night a stupendous fireworks program will be added as a great closing number.

Exhibition entries closed on June 19th, and stampede entries close on July 1st. Reserved seat reservations may be had by writing to Mrs. John Wilson, ticket superintendent, Grand Theatre, Calgary, and rooms may be reserved through Mr. Dan Whitney, president of the Alberta Hotel association.

FINED FOR NOT DESTROYING NOXIOUS WEEDS ON HIS FARM

On Thursday, June 17th, before Police Magistrate Angus, Emil Schneider was charged by Weed Inspector Young of Bigstone M.D., with neglecting to comply with a notice to destroy certain noxious weeds on his farm premises west of the city.

After hearing the evidence of the Inspector, and Field Supervisor Taylor, who both asked for leniency, as the intention was rather to warn than to punish, his worship found Schneider guilty and ordered him to pay the costs of the court—$7.00.

THOUSANDS OF MENNONITE
SETTLERS ARE ARRIVING

Six hundred and seven families of the Mennonite sect, comprising 3,635 persons, were placed on farms in western Canada last year by the Mennonite colonization board. More than 150,000 acres were involved in this land settlement movement. It is expected that at least 5,000 more of these people will come to Canada this year, and that ultimately 80,000 of them who still remain in Russia will be located on farms in the Dominion. They are essentially people of the land and are industrious and thrifty.

Here Is What "The U.F.A."
The Official Organ for the Province
Had to Say of Capt. Shaw
Liberal Leader, as Late as Sept. 15, 1925

CAPTAIN SHAW

CAPT. J. T. SHAW

"The announcement that Captain Shaw, who has represented West Calgary in the House of Commons as an Independent member for the past four years, will not be a candidate in the forthcoming election will be received with the deepest regret, not only in all parts of Alberta, but among forward-looking people throughout the Dominion.

"Capt. Shaw's withdrawal from public life would be a very serious loss to Canada. He made his mark in the last parliament, and he is recognized today as a parliamentarian of independent spirit and of outstanding ability and courage. He is one of a still small group of men in the federal sphere who have been paving the way for a real advance from the petty personal politics of today, to constructive and genuinely progressive statesmanship. His early return to public life will be hoped for by all who are familiar with his record of service in the parliament recently dissolved.

"Since the announcement of Mr. Shaw's intention not to be a candidate very great pressure has been brought to bear upon him in Calgary in the hope that he will reconsider his position. We trust that he may yet decide to allow his name to go before the electors on October 29th."

MARK YOUR BALLOT THROUGH

Do not be satisfied by marking No. 1 for your own party, but mark your second choice of the other two candidates.

MARKING YOUR SECOND CHOICE

In no way interferes with your first choice. Your first choice is not eliminated unless your candidate is low man. If you "plump" for one candidate, it means merely that you make no second choice of the other two, if your candidate should be eliminated.

Vote 1 For The Liberal Candidate

If you have determined to vote No. 1 for another candidate, then vote No. 2 for the Liberal candidate.

HENRY HAAS SHOE STORE

BAKERY INSTALLED
PEERLESS MOULDER

"Oh, how neat and convenient!"
were the expressions of nearly all the ladies who inspected the new machine at the City Bakery on Thursday evening last. The occasion was the reception given by Mr. Murray, who invited the Kiwanians, their wives, and a number of other friends to inspect the new Peerless moulder and divider, which he installed a few days ago. This machine, as the name implies, moulds, divides and rounds the loaves into shape, and it is not now necessary to touch the dough with the hands. Prior to the dough reaching the new machine, the flour is sifted and the dough is mixed by machinery, which are big labor-saving inventions
as well as being clean and sanitary.

The bread is baked in two ovens,
one a double decker, which were constructed recently, and are the best models known to the trade. After baking, the bread is placed on racks for cooling.

The next process is wrapping the loaves which is done by a machine heated by electricity and the waxed paper is quickly folded and sealed.
The loaf is then ready for delivery to the customer in the most sanitary condition.

With the installation of the new moulder, which is the only one in western Canada, the Wetaskiwin City Bakery has been made one of the most complete and convenient bake shops to be found anywhere, and Mr. Murray is to be highly commended upon his enterprise and incidentally assisting to keep Wetaski-win in the van of progress.

After the visitors had witnessed the interesting demonstrations of the various machines, dainty refreshments were served in the ice cream parlor, which has recently been renovated and fitted up for the season's business. Mr. Murray cordially invites the public to call at any time and inspect the premises and see the new machine and his model shop, of which he is justly proud.

COMMUNICATION

"We do not necessarily endorse the sentiments advanced by this or any other correspondent under this heading.—Ed.)

Editor, Wetaskiwin Times:

Dear Sir—It is really amusing to watch the efforts of our self-interested politicians and their backers to herd the farmers back into the old party net from which we escaped five years ago, and in this connection, some of the propaganda contained in your last week's issue is as good as a comic supplement.

They are so anxious to retake control of the political affairs of this province that they will do almost any thing on earth for us if we will only how the neck to the old political machine once again.

We are asked to forget the record of the old Liberal government, their abuse of our trust as shown by the George P. Smith case, and the long list of printing frauds which the investigation showed preceded it. We are asked to forget their system of distributing road money which gave $47.50 to one constituency, and $36-000 to another, because one dared to elect an opposition member, and in the other they wanted to elect a cabinet minister.

We are asked to forget their scandalous waste of public money in many ways such as the purchase of the Red Door telephone exchange at over twice what their own engineer valued it at, the purchase of a building at Peace River for a court house, which was useless and never used for the purpose intended. This of course was bought from the Liberal member at nearly twice what their expert valued it at. The payment of $2400 to Walter Campbell, president of the Edmonton Liberal association, for sinking two or three millions of buildings. The payment of $2,000,000 to political friends for railways that were never built.

These are a few of the "mistakes" which Mr. Hodson says should not be held against the "back" Liberal party, but it should be remembered that in the long run the same system will always produce the same results, and the system is not being changed. The very fact that they felt it necessary to go outside the party to get a new leader shows that it was absolutely necessary to get someone who could not be connected with their previous record.

However, the addition of this evidently weak-kneed individual will not improve their chances much.
Considering their previous record, such as the instances which I have enumerated, the talk of the Liberals about a business movement is enough to make anyone roar with laughter.

Five years ago, we decided to seek proper representation for the farming community by using our organization through which to select and elect our own representatives instead of merely accepting the hand-picked nominations of the old parties. In order to avoid centralized control, and the building up of a political machine, each constituency has absolute control of its members and political affairs, and provides its own campaign funds.

The U.F.A. believe in a cooperative form of government with representatives of all classes as opposed to the party system of strife and discord for party purposes. This will take time to work out, but the appointment of the new officers general as a discussion representative is a step in the right direction.

The new system which we inaugurated five years ago has been amply justified by results. Considering the after confusion in which they found the financial affairs of the province, our men have done well to accomplish what they have. Even our opponents admit that the U.F.A. government is honest and sincere and a reduction of over a million dollars a year in controllable expenditure shows their efficiency in any reasonable person.

Now, the issue which the voters of this constituency will have to settle on the 28th is not whether one particular man or another is elected. The real question is "shall we stand by our own movement and go forward to better things, or go back to the old system of partisanship, patronage and corruption?"

W. C. T. U.

Tuesday evening Mrs. Mills, the president of the local W.C.T.U., entertained the Union and a number of their lady friends, the occasion taking the form of a lovely shower in in-honor of Miss Virginia Mills, a June bride, who is a daughter of one of our most valued members. The pretty presents arranged in a tastefully decorated carriage were wheeled into the room by the little Misses Sharlow and were gratefully accepted by all present as they were deftly, if somewhat nervously, passed on by the bride elect, who in a few words, voiced her appreciation of things beautiful and the expression of good wishes which accompanied the gifts.

A pleasant feature of the evening was a presentation to Mrs. Nelson of a life membership certificate, which was made by Mrs. A. L. Elliott.

Greetings were also read from our only surviving charter member, Mrs.
Knight, of California.

A social half hour over the toasts brought a pleasant evening, which would augur much happiness, to a close.

corruption and waste.

To every well informed voter there is only one answer to this question.
Of course you will always find an occasional farmer (sometimes a prominent one) who is willing to be used as a decoy duck by the old parties. It should be remembered by the others, however, that whereas the decoy gets rewarded, the ducks who follow him get shot.

It is amusing to note the zeal of the Liberals for the wheat pool which they claim is being endangered by our participation in politics. At the time of the wheat pool drive, each member of the legislature was supposed to be responsible for the drive in his own constituency. It is a matter of common knowledge that in nearly all constituencies represented by Liberals the sign-up was shamefully neglected. Leduc is a good example of this. The present Liberal candidate in Wetaskiwin, though growing wheat, refused to sign the contract. Actions speak louder than words.

Now, fellow farmers, let us go to the polls on June 28th and deal party-ism in this fair province of ours a staggering shock. We hit it hard five years ago, now is the time for the knockout blow. Have no fear, for all signs point to victory in this constituency, and throughout the province. After the election we will go forward to another five years of progress, this time without a huge enriching the administration of the province, and perhaps the disappointed applicant for a salaried position under the government, will at last get tired of writing articles slandering
the U.F.A.

AN ENVIALE POSITION

"In estimated national wealth in millions of dollars, Canada stands seventh on the list, higher than Australia, Brazil, Argentina and in fact higher than any of the newer countries into which surplus population can freely flow." Dr. D. A. McGibbon, professor of political economy, University of Alberta, stated recently, in wealth per capita, Canada is surpassed only by the United States and Great Britain, continuing, "Canada is among the only five nations showing a surplus on current account, and is also among those countries having a food surplus. She ranks fifth among the nations as an exporter and is seventh as an importer."

Clean and Efficient Government for the

Next Five Years

Vote Out the Party System!

What caused the organized farmers to enter the political field, and with the consent of the electorate, to take over the reins of government in Alberta five years ago? Principally, the cynical disregard of the needs of Western Canada's greatest industry by party politicians, and the failure of the party government formerly in power to provide clean and efficient administration.

Every other business and industry in Alberta is organized, and uses all the political pressure it can bring to bear to have its wishes passed into law. During the last session of the Alberta Legislature, deputations representing organizations of manufacturers, labor unions, doctors, dentists, lawyers, livestock dealers, etc., put their views before the members of the house. This is right and proper, but why are the farmers denounced for organizing for the purpose of securing representation in the House? The reason is that the U.F.A. interferes with the working of the party system.

Alberta is primarily an agricultural province. Legislative action is required to secure lower freight rates, encourage efficient marketing, build better roads, and generally secure the welfare and prosperity of the farming community.

The party system would not be alive today but for the nucleus of city politicians who revive it at every election. Hundreds of city orators are speaking in every part of Alberta during this election, endeavoring to divide the farmers into opposing groups. The overtures made for a business government, with city representatives co-operating with rural members on non-party lines, have been rejected, except by labor.

Party System Inefficient

The party system has proved inefficient in administration as compared with the co-operative system. Here are some additional comparative figures:

Land Titles Office costs, 1921, $341,909; 1925, $156,753; Election, costs 1921, $248,000; 1923 Plebiscite, $133,000; Estimated Election costs, 1926, $130,000. Reductions in controllable expenditures, 1921 to 1924 inclusive, Alberta 14 per cent, Saskatchewan 12 per cent, Manitoba, 8 1/2 per cent. Increases in all other provinces. Agricultural Education, 1921, 320 students, $191,000; 1925, 360 students, $103,000. Many other instances can be given.

The U.F.A. are expending a considerable sum in advertising through the weekly press, the funds for this being contributed by the membership, so that the electors may know the truth. The city newspapers are endeavoring to perpetuate the party system.

To the Electors of the Provincial Constituency of Wetaskiwin

Ladies and Gentlemen:

On Monday, June 28th, you will be called upon to go to the polls and elect a member to represent this constituency in the Legislative Assembly for the next parliamentary term.

I have the honor of being selected as the Liberal Candidate and as it will be impossible to meet you all personally between now and election day, I take this opportunity of soliciting your support.

I have been a resident of Wetaskiwin for over twenty-five years; have had several years of experience both in Provincial and Municipal affairs, which together with my knowledge of farming and agricultural conditions, should enable me to deal in a practical and intelligent manner with all matters of public interest.

If elected my duties as your representative will not cease when the legislature adjourns after a six or eight weeks' session but I will be on the job twelve months in the year, and will see that the needs of the constituency in the way of public services are not neglected.

The Liberal party in this province conducted the affairs of government from 1905 to 1921, and with pioneering vigor and courage and with statesmanship and foresight, led the way in helpful, progressive and effective legislation, and administered the affairs of this young and growing country in a capable and efficient manner, laying the foundation deep, strong and true for its future greatness.

The last five years have witnessed a flabby relapse into inaction. Instead of courageously facing and solving our problems, the U.F.A. government has either ignored them or shuffled them off for future consideration.

Public service in this constituency, such as roads, bridges and telephones have been shamefully neglected and public money that should have been made available in maintaining and improving these services has been spent elsewhere in other portions of the province. Our needs in these respects are just as great, if not greater than in many other places, but they have not been presented with sufficient strength and aggressiveness to secure our just appropriations, and we have suffered beyond measure for this inefficiency and neglect.

The U.F.A. government is taking to itself a great deal of credit for a number of small savings they claim to have made, but they do not tell you that they have increased taxation to an enormous extent, taking from the people of this province over $3,000,000.00 more in 1925 than the Liberal government did in 1921. They have increased the public debt by more than $22,000,000.00, and plan to increase it another $5,000,000.00 this year. They have spent during the last five years over $5,000,000.00 more than they have collected. They have reduced the grants to schools thus forcing the ratepayers to raise more money locally for school purposes and thus increase their school taxes.

But this is not all. Here is the dangerous situation. They are planning a heavy increase in taxation on our already overburdened people by imposing, under the guise of an educational tax, a 3-mill rate on all farm lands in the province. Hon. Perrin Baker, minister of education, has been advocating this new taxation and it has been approved of by the U.F.A. convention.

They have spent an enormous amount of money on tourist or trunk roads, and as far as this constituency is concerned have cut down the grants for road purposes to such an extent that the Councillors have found it impossible to keep up the main market roads in addition to the side roads and they are now in a deplorable, disgraceful and in many cases an impassable condition. Since the U.F.A. government assumed office not one-half as much public money per year has been spent on our market roads in this constituency as when I was your former member. During that period we fully maintained the main roads from Wetaskiwin to Yeoford, and from Millet to Mulhurst, and shared in the maintenance of all the main roads east of Wetaskiwin. Since 1921, this responsibility has been thrown wholly on the Municipalities. We built and repaired all the bridges without cost to the local authorities. Now the government only shares a portion of their cost.

They have shamefully neglected the rural telephone lines, and all through the country telephone poles are either lying on the ground or leaning over, hanging by the wires, and it will take an immense amount of money to put them in proper repair.

Altogether they have conducted the affairs of the province in a most extravagant and unbusinesslike manner. They have failed to solve any of the major problems now before us. They have little of value to show for their five years of office, and neither by legislation or administration have they benefitted the farmers or the business of farming to any extent.

Our charge against them is — They have collected more money from the people of the province than the Liberal government did. They have imposed new and increased old taxes. They have increased the public debt to an alarming extent. They have failed to reduce taxation.

Many doubted in 1921 whether it was in the farmers' best interests to enter the political arena as an organization. Many are now of the opinion that it was a mistake. Their leaders are so interested in politics that they are neglecting the problems so vital to the farmers' prosperity. It devolved on the city of Edmonton and the government of B.C. to awaken public interest in the reduction of freight rates westward, and they have stood idly by and made no move to protect the farmers from the present antiquated system of grain grading that has proved to be so unfair, unjust and unsatisfactory.

Never before in any country has such an opportunity arisen for service to the farmers in the commercial field by their own organization as now presents itself. Several great marketing organizations have been launched which to be successful must command the entire time and energy of the best men in that organization. When their talents and time are divided between business and politics the marketing pools that can be made to render such profitable service are bound to suffer, and in time collapse.

Upon the prosperity of our farmers rests the hope for our future in this province. But to attain the most successful future it is essential that all classes of the community, be it farmer, laborer, merchant, mechanic or professional man—all must keep step together in marching to the goal of our destiny. The welfare of every class is inextricably interwoven with the welfare of every other class, and no government can long endure which fails to recognize these essential facts.

If you elect me as your representative I will be continually at your service, and will see that we get our just share of public money for the improvement and rebuilding of our market roads, and not be put off with less than our share, as has been the case during the last 5 years. I will press continually for the equalization of freight rates and for an improvement in the present method of grading, so that the farmers will receive full milling value for their grain.

I will urge an immediate reduction in taxation by the abolition of the Supplementary Revenue tax of 2 mills on the dollar now levied on all farm lands and urban real estate in the province and thus lighten our now too heavy tax burden.

I respectfully ask for your vote and influence, and trust that you will mark your ballot 1 for me on June 28th.

Yours faithfully,

H. J. MONTGOMERY.

lifted inquiringly in his direction. "Well, look who's here!" said the little Scout. "My gracious!" you look exactly like Dad when he brought our Jimmy home from the hospital!" "Well," said Jamie, "that's a very good way for me to look. Have you been sitting here ever since I left?" "No," said the little Scout. "I went through the back window and lay on the foot of your bed and slept about three hours, and then I was hungry and I went over to Margaret Cameron to ask her for something to eat, and I ran into her just as she was leaving. She said Molly had telephoned her to come in for a few days."

Jamie sat down suddenly. His solution of what he was to do with James Lewis MacFarlane, Junior, had been to transfer him to the care of Margaret Cameron. He had planned to ask his neighbor to take the child and care for it until he could find the right kind of a woman to undertake the job.

"Unlock the door," he said to the little Scout, and together they went in. Jamie held the small bundle on the davenport and then he stepped back and drew his hands over his perplexed face and said to the little Scout, "I wish you'd tell me what I am going to do."

"What's eatin' you?" inquired the small person, casually.

Jamie pointed to the bundle.

"That's a baby," he said, "a live baby that needs nursing and feeding and loving, and I thought Margaret Cameron would be the woman who'd do it. Are you sure she said she had gone visiting and she would be gone no telling how long?"

"She didn't say 'no telling how long'—she said 'a few days'! I should think a few days would be a week, maybe."

"And what," demanded Jamie, "am I going to do in 'a week maybe' with a live baby?"

"Aw, feed it to the birds and let's get on with our work. We're wasting a lot of time on the garden," said the little Scout.

"You look here," said Jamie, "you aren't talking about a crust of bread. That's a baby in that bundle, a tiny boy who wants his chance to live and grow and paddle a canoe and ride a horse and be a scout master just as bad as you do."

"Aw!" said the disgruntled little person.

"I hate to tell you, buddy," he said, "I hate to tell you, but the truth is this baby hasn't any mother. The task of getting him into the world was too big for her. She paid for his life with her life. She paid for his life with her life. She was like your Aunt Beth. She went over to see what Heaven had in store for her laughing, laughing out loud, laughing the gayest laugh of contentment and exultation."

Then suddenly the little Scout came up to one knee and then the other, and then slowly and erectly, then from the depths of pre-contemplation, stumbled to the telephone and took down the receiver, and gave a number. Jamie stood breathlessly, fearfully, and listened to a one-sided conversation.

"I want Mom."

"Hello, Mom, is that you?"

"Say, Mom, we got the dirtiest egg out here this morning! We got a new splinter baby boy just like Jimmy when he first came from the hospital, just as nice and sweet and everything. And, Mom, this is dirty part of it. Getting him here was too much for his mother. She went down on us and we ain't got her, and we are got the baby, and his name's Jamie after his dad—just like our baby!"

And Mom, we thought Margaret Cameron would take him and take care of him for us, and that's another dirty thing! She's gone off on a visit and she won't be home for three or four days, and we ain't got a thing to feed him!"

"The little Scout clapped a hand over the mouthpiece, turned to Jamie, and in a strained whisper inquired:

"Have we got any clothes?"

"I think so," said Jamie.

"The small person turned back.

"We got clothes of clothes. Everything we need. What we need is somebody to do the darning and the feeding and the changing—"

Then the little Scout sprang straight into the air and gave a shout.

"Bully for you, Mom! I knew you'd come across! Do you see why I didn't ask? I was giving you your chance! I knew all the time you would. And, say, Mom, take your roadster and step on the gas! Any minute he may begin to yell and we don't know what to do. He just came in the night. Jamie's too big, and I'm afraid. Take the shortest cut, and if a speed cop mixes with you, bunt him and come on!"

Jamie sat down and turned back the face blanket and worked back the clothing and pushed away the hood strings tied under the chin, and looked long and intently at the baby. He did not regard him of any one. He was very small. He had eyes and a nose and a mouth. He was extremely red. The girl on the pillow was not reproduced in him so far as Jamie could see.

In an unbelievably short time a ditty sport model, a beautiful car suitable for the show place of an automobile exhibit, swung to a halt and almost before it stopped the little Scout was on the running board. Jamie could see that the dirty arms were thrust inside and the face lifted to the face of a woman moving toward the door. He could not hear the conversation that ensued. Something was asked on the part of the Scout Master, and that something met a laugh that sounded mellow and sweet on Jamie's ears. But the door was barred, the Scout was insistent, the hand that reached out to open the door was very small, and then Jamie distinctly caught the phrase: "Aw, please, Mom, don't."

And he heard the answer: "All right, then."

"Mom, this is Jamie!"

Jamie made his best bow and stood for inspection. He got it. Careful, incisive, but not offensively long. A firm hand was held out to him.

"I've been intending to come for some time," said the mellow voice that Jamie recognized as the one he had frequently heard over the telephone. "I've had my hands reasonably full with our little Jimmy and a Danish Princess presiding in our kitchen, and keeping the children in school. I think I took it for granted that anyone the Bee Master would leave in charge here would be all right, and so I haven't gotten around to make friends as I should have done. But, of course, our little Scout has been all right with you."

"I am sorry," she said, as she examined the baby's little face. "If your baby has cost his mother her life, I am sorry. But I must congratulate you on the baby himself. You'll have your compensations. He is a beautiful child, really a beautiful child!"

The pair of deft hands, glittering with sparkling rings and to her face the baby and lifted it, and the mother who had in her heart to be a mother to any baby, to all babies that needed her, sat down in the Bee Master's chair, its first occupant since his going, and lifted the baby and held it against her breast and to her face and laughed to it and said sweet little words of nonsense and praised it and cooed around it and cuddled it up and then paused and looked at Jamie.

"I don't know," said the soft voice, "that you were married."

"I hardly knew it myself," said Jamie. "It was such a very hurried marriage on account of circumstances I may explain to you some day. I'd been overseas and I brought back a wound and there were reasons as to why we were married."

I am shocked beyond expression that the baby's mother lost her life. I had not even once thought that such a thing might occur, and I had depended on Margaret Cameron. Before I knew what the little Scout was doing you had your call. I'm afraid it's too big an imposition for words."

The face that met Jamie's was a laughing face.

"Don't bother about that," Mrs. Meredith said. "I'm willing to give a few days' time for a lovely baby named Jamie. It will be like having my own over again. You needn't worry in the least. Have you clothes for him?"

Jamie pointed to the suitcase.

"Enough for two or three babies, I'd judge."

To prove his statement, Jamie opened the case. Across the baby's pair of interested eyes explored its contents.

"Why those are lovely things, exquisitely made! I almost hate to use them. I could use some of Jimmy's things just at first when there is so much mulling, and a tiny baby is rather a messy proposition."

"I imagine those things will be more carefully handled in your hands than at the hospital," said Jamie. "Go ahead and use them. When they are gone little Jamie shall have some more."

"That's fine!" said Mrs. Meredith. "That's fine! You will have something of your very own to work for now."

"I can't drive and hold the baby, too," said Mrs. Meredith.

The little Scout made a clean leap to the seat and held eager arms.

"I can hold him! I can hold him eductively like you do and hold the face cloth down. I want to hold him!"

Jamie smiled quizzically.

"And if Fat Ole Bill and the Nice Child and Angel Pace come trooping down the street and see you holding a baby—"

"Now, you look here," broke in the little Scout. "Fat Ole Bill and the Angel and the whole bunch of 'em can't see you holding a baby."

just try in their own fat! All of 'em's gettin' too fat, anyway. The Scout Master tightened careful arms around the little bundle and called back: "I'll telephone twice a day. I'm goin' to stay at home and do all the caretaking myself except the feedin' and changin' and bathin'."

"I am sorry," she said, as she examined the baby's little face. "If your baby has cost his mother her life, I am sorry. But I must congratulate you on the baby himself. You'll have your compensations. He is a beautiful child, really a beautiful child!"

TWENTY POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE QUALITIES

A list of twenty positive and twenty negative qualities is given below. A few minutes might be spent to good advantage by checking the qualities in neither column that seem to affect you personally. If the check marks occur in the high hand column, improve the situation by trying to cultivate the qualities listed in the left column:

optimism	pessimism
tact	indiscretion
courtesy	discourtesy
initiative	inaction
sincerity	insincerity
purpose	irresolution
knowledge	ignorance
work	laziness
thrift	extravagance
loyalty	disloyalty
trust	despair
activity	indolence
health	sickness
perseverance	hesitation
patience	impatience
unselfishness	selfishness
enthusiasm	apathy
temperance	intemperance

J. S. Knox says that "in the beginning, personality is simply a matter of choice and thinking. If a man thinks pessimistic thoughts, nothing in the world can keep him from being a pessimist; and the world is not very kind to pessimists. If he never permits pessimism to enter his mind, but always thinks optimistic thoughts, no fate can make him anything but an optimist. 'Courage is the chief attribute of manliness,' says Webster while fear and other negative qualities paralyze usefulness."

ELDERS INDUGED SUNDAY

There was a good attendance at the evening service last Sunday, at the Millet United church. Rev. M. H. Wilson of Edmonton was present and gave a most interesting and helpful address. After the sermon, an impressive ceremony took place when six men, chosen from the Larch Tree, Hillside and Millet congregations, were inducted as elders. Rev. Mr. Hall, of Larch Tree, also assisted the pastor, Rev. J. B. Howard, in the service.

GRANDVIEW TEACHER LEAVING

We learn that Mr. Carlisle is leaving the Grandview school district, where he has been teaching for the past year.

In conjunction with enthusiastic school work, Mr. Carlisle has promoted steadily the outdoor games for all seasons, basketball, football and baseball, with much success. The residents of the district regret that he is leaving and wish him every success in his new work.

TODAY!

I say each morn, when I arise,
"Today I know some glad surprise is hidden on Life's path for me."
And I greet each hour expectantly.
"So let the sky be blue or grey—
The past is gone—and here's today!"

Today may bring me some new friend!
To go with me until life's end—
Today may bring me some new song
To help me drive dull care along—
One fleeting hour, today, may hold
That I will treasure more than gold.

But if some heartache, sorrow, care,
Be waiting for me anywhere—
To take the sunshine for a while;
To bring me tears and dim my smile,
May I have strength to bravely say:
"I've learned a lesson from today!"

Today is a sweet mystery.
A wide, untrammelled path for me.
To try my feet—to learn to live,
To sacrifice in, and forgive;
Or gladden someone's lonely way—
This is my task each new today!"
—V. Grace Wheeler.

THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT

Tell us not in mournful silence
That our movement's on the wane,
Touse up from your peaceful slumber
Get out and make things hum.

If we go to work in earnest, we can make things hit on high, Dust thou art, to dust returneth, is a song of bye and bye.

All the past is gone for ever, you can't call it our moment back;
And the future may come never;
this is so, so help me Mack.

Now's the time to do your boosting,
do not wait tomorrow's dawn,
In the grave you may be roosting,
all your boosting chances gone.

Lay aside your little hammer; grab a horn and toot a few, Squelch the knicker's del. blab hammer with a joyful blast or two.

This here movement's sure a pippin,
and we ought to boost it big,
When we hear some growler yippin',
we should smit him on the wig.

Nighty oaks that grow and flourish come from acorns plain and small,
With your boosting you may nourish, ish something that may help us all.

Something that may prove a blessing to the tolling sons of me, That's the point that I am stressing,
boost and boost and boost again.

People love the snailing booster, and for him they loudly cheer,
But they hate the knocking rooster,
long to pelt him on the ear.

—Farmer

EDMONTON FAIR
BIG ATTRACTION

"The biggest and best fair ever held in Edmonton!" is the consensus of opinion of those who are familiar with the arrangements for the Edmonton Exhibition and Historical Pageant, July 12 to 17.

There have never been such outstanding headline attractions. The famous H. M. Coldstream Guards Band, universally recognized as one of the premier musical organizations of the world, will in itself be worth a great deal more than the cost of admission. There is a grand Historical Pageant, celebrating the coming of age of the city and province, with a cast of six hundred persons, all working together in a mass of color and a maze of movement on a huge, specially constructed stage.

This mammoth spectacle will tell the thrilling story of the development of Edmonton and western Canada.

Other attractions include district exhibits of agricultural and dairy products from a number of electoral districts in northern and central Alberta, some of the finest grand stand attractions ever seen in the west; the renaissance of John J. Burns, railway shows; exceptionally brilliant fireworks displays; horse races each afternoon; valuable collection of oil paintings from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; championship cat and dog shows; special classes for canaries; and special sweet pot displays. All entries for the exhibition will close on June 26.

REFORESTATION IN WESTERN CANADA

Reforestation, as conducted by the Dominion government, cost $1,185,000 last year, and the details were explained in the house of commons by Hon. Chas. Stewart, minister of the interior.

On the forest reserves in western Canada, 22,000,000 acres, timber is sold under conditions providing for reforestation by natural regeneration, which is considered more satisfactory than artificial planting. It is the intention to extend these forest reserves so that eventually they shall include all non-agricultural lands capable of growing trees and to provide for their maintenance in a forested condition by natural regeneration, except where entirely denuded areas demand artificial methods. To establish shelter belts on the prairies the forest service operates tree planting stations at Indian Head and Weyburn, Sask., from which stock is distributed free on condition that it is given the necessary attention. During the past 25 years 80,499,455 deciduous trees and 1,374,418 conifers have been distributed; 75,141 plantations, aggregating 34,663 acres, have been established, of which 70 per cent have been successful; 15 per cent fairly so. In the west the federal government has full control of forestry matters, but in eastern Canada it has no administrative responsibility on crown lands, the latter being held by the respective provinces.

EARLY RISING

It is perhaps a characteristic of many men who have made their mark in the world that they were early risers. To Wellington, for instance, is attributed the saying: "When one begins to turn in bed, it is time to get up."

Other ideas on this perhaps unpopular topic are as follows:

"The early morning has gold in its mouth."—Franklin.

"Few ever lived to a great age, and fewer still ever became distinguished, who were not in the habit of early rising."—Dr. John Todd.

"Next to temperance, a quiet conscience, a cheerful mind and active habits, I place early rising as a means of health and happiness."—Pint.

"He that from childhood has made rising before familiar to him will not waste the best part of his life in drowsiness."—Locke.

Chesterfield had definite ideas concerning the number of hours needed for sleep, and said: "Six, or at most, seven hours' sleep is, for a constancy, as much as you or anybody else can want; more is only laziness, and drowsiness, and is, I am persuaded, but unwholesome and stupefying."

Southey praised the early morning hours by writing: "Whoever has tasted the breath of morning knows that the most invigorating and most delightful hours of the day are commonly spent in bed; though it is the evident intention of Nature that we should enjoy and profit by them."

Antoninus argues as follows: "When you find an unwillingness to rise early in the morning, endeavor to rouse your faculties, and act up to the morning. For the space of forty years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to ten additional years to a man's life."

EARLY RISING

It is perhaps a characteristic of many men who have made their mark in the world that they were early risers. To Wellington, for instance, is attributed the saying: "When one begins to turn in bed, it is time to get up."

Other ideas on this perhaps unpopular topic are as follows:

"The early morning has gold in its mouth."—Franklin.

"Few ever lived to a great age, and fewer still ever became distinguished, who were not in the habit of early rising."—Dr. John Todd.

"Next to temperance, a quiet conscience, a cheerful mind and active habits, I place early rising as a means of health and happiness."—Pint.

"He that from childhood has made rising before familiar to him will not waste the best part of his life in drowsiness."—Locke.

Chesterfield had definite ideas concerning the number of hours needed for sleep, and said: "Six, or at most, seven hours' sleep is, for a constancy, as much as you or anybody else can want; more is only laziness, and drowsiness, and is, I am persuaded, but unwholesome and stupefying."

Southey praised the early morning hours by writing: "Whoever has tasted the breath of morning knows that the most invigorating and most delightful hours of the day are commonly spent in bed; though it is the evident intention of Nature that we should enjoy and profit by them."

Antoninus argues as follows: "When you find an unwillingness to rise early in the morning, endeavor to rouse your faculties, and act up to the morning. For the space of forty years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to ten additional years to a man's life."

Perhaps one of the strongest arguments is put by Doddridge, who says that "the difference between rising at five and seven o'clock in the morning, for the space of forty years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to ten additional years to a man's life."

THE HIDDEN ISSUE

(By J. H. Rodson)
 There has not yet been offered to the public a proper explanation of why the Hon. Mr. Greenfield was ousted from the premiership of this province.
 To the more insistent among the faithful of Henry W. Wood's followers, a whispered explanation has been privately given, and this is the terrible secret: Mr. Greenfield was found to be too intimate with the big financial interests when he was in the East. That, it is said, was the reason why the U.F.A. legislators in secret caucus assembled turned down their thumbs on their one-time hero—the Hon. Herbert.

It was, however, quite natural that a premier of a province that regularly borrowed millions of dollars each year should be well received by the financial moguls. It is possible that they hatched some together. It is a fact that is becoming increasingly apparent that the leaders of the farmers' government and the heads of the farmers' cooperative undertakings are being unduly influenced by the greatest of our Canadian financial institutions—the Bank of Montreal.

The provincial liquor commissioner, the manager of the irrigation project, and the new attorney general were all associated with the Bank of Montreal. The manager of the Alberta wheat pool also came from that institution.

The recent appointment of Mr. Lyman shows that, whatever influence finance had over Mr. Greenfield, the same influence is operating with Mr. Brownlee. The Bank of Montreal, still, it seems, predominates over the Alberta government, and of the wheat pool.

It is only natural that finance should have a large influence in the affairs of the people. What the people have to watch is that it is not used against them. Let us scan the immediate past.

We know that in 1925, when it seemed possible that the farmers of the North American continent were about to achieve financial independence, that the associated and combined financial interests of this continent deliberately forced the price of all farm commodities to a point that was below the cost of production; we know that as a result of this wicked manipulation thousands upon thousands of farmers lost their homes which had been earned by life-long toil; and we know that the money world refused to allow the agriculturalists to become financially independent, for it is the vast amount of interest paying capital which is invested in the land that upholds the whole financial fabric. If the farmers, as a class, became lenders instead of borrowers, money would be so plentiful that its value, like that of wheat in times of overproduction, would be insufficient to cover its handling charges.

In support of the above view, the following extract taken from "The Banker's Magazine," which is published in the U.S., is enlightening: "History repeats itself in regular cycles. This truth is well known among our principal men now engaged in forming an imperialism of capital to govern the world. . . . by thus dividing the voters we can get them to expend their energies in fighting over questions of no importance to us except as touchstones of the economy. . . . By history we are given an opportunity to take from office the

The record of the U.F.A. government is a record of complete surrender to the financial interests. It paid to a bank over a million and a quarter for a worthless interest in the bankrupt E.D. & B.C. railway. It has filled all of its more important positions from the Bank of Montreal.

The president of the wheat pool who is also the director of the government, talks to discourage the acquisition of essential elevators for the successful operation of the pool, while a director of that bank acquires the Alberta Pacific line of grain elevators and adds them to the already numerous Federal lines at the strategically opportune time when the first signed pool contracts are about to expire.

The farmers of Alberta, if they will realize it, have enough to look after without attempting to deal with the

VOTE "1" FOR E. E. SPARKS

In voting for a candidate an elector should exercise the same care as he would in engaging a manager for his business.

The main question should be "What are his qualifications, and his record?" You judge a prospective employee, not on what he promises to do, but what he has done.

The Liberals have a record of sixteen years of office in the Province. This record they do not, and cannot defend. The public, however, has not forgotten it.

The Conservatives have no record at all. Their return, as that of the Liberals, would mean a return to the party system, and all that it implies.

The U.F.A. ask for your vote on June 28 on their record for the past five years. They offer a continuation of sound business administration for the benefit of the people of Alberta as a whole, and co-operation in place of party division.

The only argument Liberals and Conservatives is that of promises. The Government's argument is performance.

During the past five years, the cost of administration has been reduced 14 per cent., the Civil Service has been transferred from a basis of patronage to a basis of merit, a real highway policy has been put into effect, health and education services have been increased, etc. Efficiency is much greater in every department of government as a result of transference from a basis of party favoritism to one of business administration.

The Government have had to face the opposition of the daily press, they have had to shoulder the legacies of railways, irrigation schemes, cow bill, seed and relief payments, etc., responsible for our present debt. They have had to face the inaction of the Liberal Government in Ottawa with regard to natural resources, railway and colonization responsibility, provincial control of power and mineral development, etc. But despite these handicaps they have made remarkable progress.
